

How To Kill Capitalism – Short Essay

Hello, I am Jay, socialist and environmentalist. The current state of our world troubles me. We produce endless goods that can't be recycled, we're destroying the planet for the sake of money. This could lead to very bad things, wars over dwindling resources perhaps. In this short document I'll go over a game plan to reducing the impact of your actions in this world. I will also, as the title says, tell you how to kill capitalism. It's not going to be easy but it certainly is worth the time.

Let's start with the foundation. The idea is that you build an organization that implements your ideas. You could call it a company, in which case it's syndicalism. You could even set up a church with your ideals as well, in which case it's like a theocracy. Try to fall within the law of the land at least. Any of them should have an anti-capitalist tone, though not against the idea of money, you need funds in any system. The idea is to somehow pool wealth to get things done.

Who needs a government to do these things anyway? Everyone in a free society has the right to use their wealth as they see fit. Government is meaningless, anything it can do can be done by any organization of people. That's what a country is after all, an organization of people. The people are really all that matters, they define the country's characteristics.

Now the next step is the tricky part. Make your organization ethical. Set up the desired system, you can even have your own elections if you see fit. What you're aiming for is a sort of quasi-government, with it's own rules and regulations. You have freedom of association, you can exile or excommunicate whomever you wish. The idea is you reduce or eliminate the need for capitalism. Set up sub-organizations for ethical and perhaps waste-less manufacturing. Ethical business is not a dream, give the power to the workers in sub-organizations that add to the collective of your organization, declare these companies your associates. Remove any company from the approved list that doesn't follow the rules. Don't try to be too perfect, just try to be more ethical.

The first priority is food, you should start by buying farm land and producing food. Meet the basic needs and try to recruit people into your organization. You could quickly become popular, you may even be able to apply for non-profit status. All up to you really.

Grow the wealth of your quasi-government. Methods without environmental harm are preferable. It doesn't need to be all at once, the idea is to become less dependant on companies that take wealth from the worker or harm the environment. Starve out the upper class parasites who own the companies. Make right this system so it does not harm the earth. Research recycling methods, try to make clean alternatives. It will go a long way.

You can create a society within a society, some have done this. If we were all Amish the capitalists would be at a loss for words and money. You can do far more damage to this system by legal means than illegal. You are free to associate as you wish in (maybe almost) every country in the entire world.

Try to keep things under control, have plans in case of sabotage. Hire your own security. Think about the best way to do things before you get going. Perhaps you want a sort of collective where you all pool wealth for the greater good. The possibilities are almost entirely up to you.

I think I will keep this to one page. The concept is with you now. Build any society you think is ethical. The power is there, you just need to pick up the tools and get to work. Good luck.
